SOUTHEAST KANSAS — A local organization is making sure Southeast Kansas is aware of their resources during the pandemic.

The Live Well Crawford County branch has launched a new campaign called Kansas Beats The Virus. The organization created a list of 21 local grocery stores in Crawford County which offer contactless shopping. This was done to not only limit the spread of covid-19 but also support local businesses.

Ron Rhodes, Ron's Supermarket Owner, said, "We see the need in the community with a lot of people have transportation problems, or can't get out, or may be restricted due to COVID and may need groceries delivered to them."

A full list of the stores are available on Live Well Crawford County's Facebook page.

In partnership with the Kansas Leadership Center, we're launching a #KSBeatsTheVirus campaign to help slow the spread of the virus. Here are two flyers with 21 different places in Crawford County Kansas to get your groceries without ever stepping foot in a store. These flyers will also be distributed at testing sites throughout the county. Additionally, we've partnered with Ron's Supermarket to remove the delivery fee for the first 300 shoppers. PLEASE SHARE and help support our local businesses while staying safe.
